

Volunteer Role Description

Volunteer role: Volunteer Ranger

Location: Bushy Park, Richmond Park or Both

Purpose: To engage, inspire and inform members of the public about the history, heritage and wildlife of the parks

Lead contact: Joanna Haywood – Volunteer Officer

Description	The Royal Parks are vital for nature and people and have a fascinating history. We want to inspire and educate park users, furthering their understanding and appreciation of these amazing landscapes. Bushy and Richmond Parks are not only fantastic pockets of nature within our bustling capital, but lifelines for thousands of living things. Both parks are Sites of Special Scientific Interest, and Richmond is a National Nature Reserve. These parks date back almost 500 years and have rich natural and historical heritage that we want to share with our park users. The Volunteer Rangers play a key role in protecting and future-proofing these parks by engaging with visitors and offering information and advice about their wildlife, history and heritage. During the first year of the service Volunteer Rangers spoke to over 6500 visitors in Bushy and Richmond Parks, enhancing experiences and offering advice on how best to appreciate these spaces. We are now looking to increase volunteer numbers so that we can provide the service more fully, try new ways of information sharing and inspire even more park users. This is an exciting opportunity for anyone wanting to develop their public engagement skills, “give something back” or contribute to the protection of these precious parklands by sharing their passion with other park users.
